Pages 583–586

The corresponding author, Benjamin D. Horne, has requested that the readers be made aware of the following mistake in the above named paper:

In table 3 (on page 586), the feature names friends and followers was accidentally flipped. This slightly changes some of the results. Specifically, experts tend to have less friends, but more followers than their friends. The argument that experts may use friends as news sources is slightly weakened, but still valid looking at the language features.

The published datasets do not have this error. The error only occurs in table 3 of the paper.
